WHAT'S HAPPENING AT KINGSTON FORESHORE

Welcome to Shoreline, the newsletter keeping you up to date with all things Kingston Foreshore.

THE KINGSTON STORYBOARDS ARE MOVING

In 2005 the Kingston Storyboards were installed along the Wentworth Avenue and Cunningham Street boundaries of the Kingston Foreshore site. Stretching more than 500 metres, the storyboards detail the history of the site and community which grew around it through photos and text; drawing on memories and stories of local people as well as official histories and collections.

The storyboards were designed as a temporary installation to improve the visual amenity along Wentworth Avenue, prior to the development of the Kingston Arts Precinct. After 11 years of weather, many are now quite deteriorated to the point they cannot be repaired.

The LDA is in the process of assessing what options may exist for a permanent reflection on the history depicted on these storyboards and will be looking to coordinate this with the development of the Kingston Arts Precinct. In the interim, the LDA has a number of replacement storyboards and will be looking to install these on the boundary of the vacant block adjacent to the Prince development and replace the existing deteriorated storyboards on Wentworth Avenue with some new project hoarding. This work is expected to commence before the end of the year.

GREVILLEA PARK UPGRADES

The ACT Government is upgrading the facilities at Grevillea Park, located on the northern foreshore of the East Basin of Lake Burley Griffin, to provide opportunities for more water based recreation groups to use the area. These works include the construction of new public car parking and the provision of utility services.

The works also include the construction of a new, modern, specially designed and constructed rowing shed; the Grevillea Park Rowing Facility. The Capital Lakes Rowing Club will relocate to this new facility in early 2017 to allow the club to continue their activities.

The design and construction of any future buildings will be subject to NCA approval.
